

They notice the fins, the powerful engines of the vintage cars, the chrome, trunks large enough to hold a few buddies trying to sneak into the drive-in, and the re-done interiors of leather and the wood.

Visitors remark on the add-ons, all the doo dads, the fuzzy dice, trinkets, mirrors, search lights, bobble heads and 60s stuff. These folks like to check out

Paul Graves' purple machine – a beautiful '52 Ford Vickie. This plum Crown Victoria has all the options and detailing available to take it back to factory showroom condition and specs.

But, more than anything, it's the memories the cars stir up that really get people reminiscing at the shows.

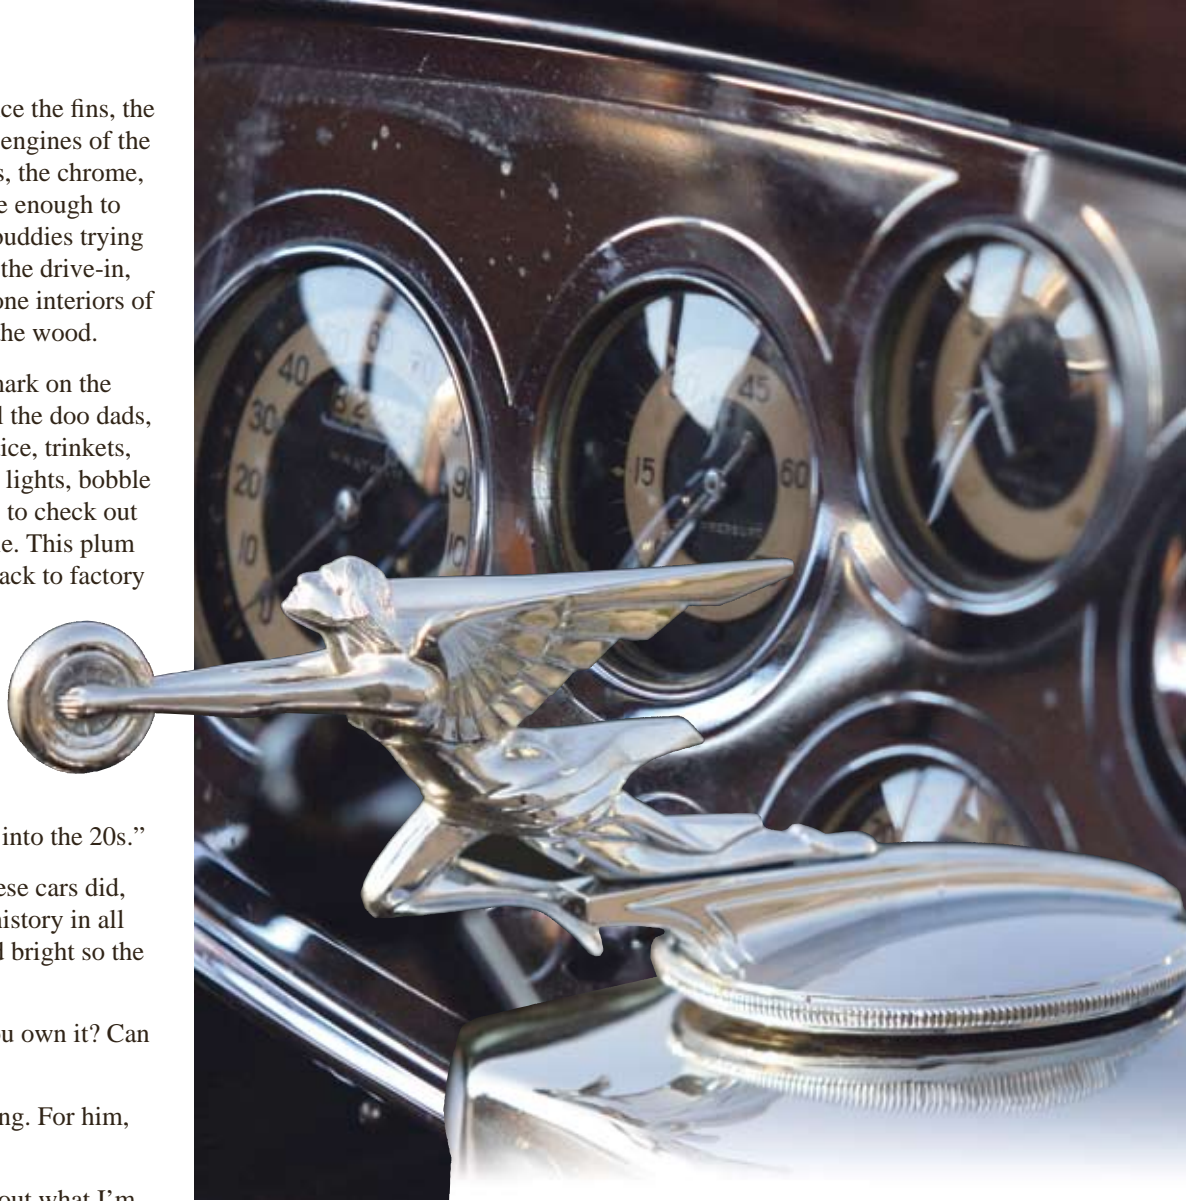

"I have so many elderly people saying 'Oh, that's my dad's car, I remember sitting in the back of this going to the drive-in movies and driving down the main street etc, etc,'" Randell explains. "It's memories, and not just for the 50s and 60s, but for people right back into the 20s."

"And they'll sit there and talk to you for days about what some of these cars did, and some of these cars do have a history in Parry Sound. So there's history in all these cars, that appeals to all ages," he says. "Plus, they're shiny and bright so the kids love 'em, mine has an ah-oo-ga horn,"

Young or old alike, all have questions, like: "Do you drive it? Do you own it? Can I buy it? Where can I buy one?"

"Where do you get that work done?" is a good one to get Tudor talking. For him, like many in the club, the building is the "fun part".

"And when it's done, I'm looking around and my wife is worried about what I'm
