ON OUR COVER

"John Macfie"

Finding a great cover photo is always one of the most challenging assignments for the creative team at Sideroads.

We try to choose a photo that will catch your interest, look great and reflect the season, as Sideroads is produced quarterly according to the seasons.

For our one year anniversary, winter 2007/2008 issue, we had the choice between a cover of a local icon, or a scene from our ice hut story that portrayed the quintessential winter pastime of ice fishing on our frozen lakes, surrounded by pure white snow and the blinding winter sun.

We decided to run local historian John Macfie who was photographed by Cody Storm Cooper. The photo shoot was a casual affair at Mr. Macfie's home. While shooting photos Mr. Macfie playfully swung his authentic native mukluks around his neck and Cody Storm Cooper captured the moment that became our cover photo.

John Macfie is an instantly recognizable subject and we hope the warm, dramatic lighting of the photo will remind you that while winter is about enjoying the outdoors; for some, winter is about staying warm and cozy, and a season when we often have time to slow down and reminisce.
